A Genealogical History

OF THE

FAMILY OF ADAMS

OF

BY

THE LATE REV. BENJAMIN WILLIAM ADAMS, D.D.

EDITED AND REVISED BY

MAXWELL RICHARD WILLIAM PEERS ADAMS,

MEMBER OF THE HON. SOCIETY OF THE MIDDLE TEMPLE, BARRISTER-AT-LAW.

LONDON

MITCHELL AND HUGHES, 140 WARDOUR STREET, W.

1903.

Preface.

Mr. BOSWELL has recorded, in his "Life of Dr. Samuel Johnson," that the great philosopher was of opinion that "a chronicle should be kept in every considerable family to preserve the character and transactions of successive generations" ["Life," London, 1835, vol. iv., p. 235]; and in these days, when the study of Genealogy is so general, no apology is needed for giving to the public the family history contained in the following pages.

The late Rev. Benjamin William Adams, D.D., by whom this History was compiled, was well known by his valuable contributions to the genealogical and archaeological literature of his time. I cannot, however, refrain from offering a tribute to his industry and patience in collecting the materials for this his latest work, which he never published. A glance at any single page is sufficient to testify to the amount of labour that must have been expended in searching Parish Registers and other sources of genealogical information; and when it is also stated that particulars are given of no less than 240 individuals bearing the name of Adams, and of about 130 families with which matrimonial alliances have been contracted, some idea of the magnitude of the task he accomplished may be realized.

It has fallen to my lot, at the request of some members of the family and with the consent of Mrs. Benjamin William Adams, to revise and prepare Dr. Adams' manuscript for the press, and in doing so I have taken the opportunity to bring the record up to date as far as possible.

I tender my thanks to all who have assisted me in the work, and particularly to Mrs. B. W. Adams and Miss Constance Louisa Adams, who have both given me much valuable information.

To Messrs. Mitchell and Hughes, the Publishers, my thanks are also due for the admirable accuracy with which the complicated printing, which a genealogical work necessarily entails, has been carried out.

A Genealogical History

OF THE

Family of Adams of Caban, etc.

INTRODUCTION.

THE following History has been very carefully compiled from the most authentic sources, viz., information from members of the family, monumental inscriptions, parochial and family registers, wills, deeds, family manuscripts, published works in the libraries of Trinity College, Dublin, the Royal Irish Academy, the Royal Dublin Society, etc.

The original surname of the family was "Adam,"* and they appear to have been the constant and steady friends of the Red Douglasses, Earls of Angus, ever ready to unite their followers either to repel an inroad of the English or in turn to become the invaders; and though they have never obtained a more permanent title than knighthood, they have reached to the highest position in the different professions, and have formed matrimonial alliances with the noble houses of Douglas, Leslie, O'Neill, Magennis, Cosby, etc., ever maintaining their position in that class of society so happily described by Sir Bernard Burke, Ulster King-of-Arms, "as holding the next place to the Nobility, the untitled Country Gentlemen, a class, though be it remembered, not one degree below the other in antiquity of descent, personal accomplishments, and national usefulness; nay, the Chiefs of the Houses from which the Nobility spring are generally to be found in this division of the Aristocracy, and for the simple reason that the eldest son and heir being already provided for, the field of adventure belongs almost exclusively to the junior members of the family, who, thus forced upon the arena, achieve by their prowess or their talents—the sword or the pen—fame, wealth, and eminence." (Preface to Burke's "Landed Gentry," 1846.)

* It would seem that inattention to spelling first caused the alteration of the name from Adam to Adams, for we find that Jane Adams née Allen (see p. 5), wife of James Adams of Monaghan, is called Adams in the will of her mother, Margaret Allen of Kilmore, dated 5 December 1694, and Adam in that of her brother, Richard Allen of Kilmore, co. Monaghan, dated 14 October 1724, in which her son also is called Allen Adam. Both wills are in the Probate Office, King's Inns, Dublin. See also the extracts given in the APPENDIX, where Colonel Adams is also called McAdam.

The following description of Northlands, the seat of the senior branch of the family, is from the pen of the same talented author:—"Northlands, in the county of Cavan, the seat of the Very Rev. Samuel Adams. This mansion was built in the year 1822 by the present proprietor, the estate itself having been in the family for the last 150 years. The house, which is of moderate size, is in the plain English style of building. In front of the hall door is a porch of cut-stone such as may still be seen in many parts of this country. Above forty acres of underwood was planted here in 1817." (Burke's "Visitation of Seats and Arms," vol. ii., p. 93.) Several acres of plantation, with Cornalaragh Lough, have since been added to the demesne, which is now the residence of Samuel Allen Adams.

THE ARMS OF THE FAMILY OF ADAMS.

The Arms borne by the family of Adams are: Gules, a heart between three cross-crosslet fitché or; and for Crest: On a mount vert a cross-crosslet fitchée or, charged with a bleeding heart, as registered in the Office of Arms in Dublin.

Richard Adams of Wainsford, Hauts. however, used as a crest a wyvern gules, and his descendants still use the same. It is not known how this crest came to be assumed by this branch of the family, but there is a tradition that Richard Adams adopted his mother's crest, she being a Leslie.

Another branch of the family used as crest a cross-crosslet fitchée gules, surmounted by a sword in saltire proper, hilted and pommeléd or, which is the crest of the family of Adam of Blair Adam, from whom the Adamsses are descended.

The descendants of Richard Adams of Wainsford also quarter the arms of Peers. viz. Azure, on a fesse argent between three pelicans or, vulning themselves proper, as they appear—the said Richard having married Louisa, daughter and coheir of Newsham Peers of Aiveston in Warwickshire, who died 1803.

THE FAMILY HISTORY.

The first authentic account of the family is recorded in Scotland, in the reign of Alexander II. (1214—1249), when

SIR DUNCAN ADAM, Knt., affixed his signature, as a witness, to a donation to the church of Wemyss (Burke's "Visitation of Seats and Arms," vol. ii., p. 31) by a progenitor of the Earl of Wemyss. His successor,

ALEXANDER ADAM, lived in the reign of Alexander III. (1249—1286) (Burke's "Visitation of Seats and Arms," vol. ii., p. 31), and is traditionally reported to have married into the illustrious house of Douglas. His son,

DUNCAN ADAM, lived during the eventful reign of Robert Bruce (1306—1329) (Burke's "Visitation of Seats and Arms," vol. ii., p. 31); he married and left four sons, Robert, John, Reginald, and Duncan (Burke's "Landed Gentry," 1846, vol. i., p. 4), from whom all the Adams, Adamsons, and Addies in Scotland are descended. The third son was very likely the Right Rev. Reginald Adam, Bishop of Brechin, Scotland, one of the most influential men of his time, and was frequently employed by the Estates of the Nation in foreign negotiations during the troubled reign of David Bruce (1329—1371), in all of which he acquitted himself ably and honourably (Burke's "Visitation of Seats and Arms," vol. ii., p. 31). The youngest son,

DUNCAN ADAM, with several other brave Scottish gentlemen, accompanied James, Lord Douglas, in the expedition which he undertook in order to convey, in a golden casket, the embalmed heart of King Robert Bruce to the Holy Sepulchre at Jerusalem (Burke's "Visitation of Seats and Arms," vol. ii., p. 31). On arriving there, Douglas solemnly buried it before the High Altar, and on his voyage home, being forced by a storm to land at Valencia in Spain, he found Alphonsus, King of Arragon, preparing to march against the Saracens or Moors. Lord Douglas joined his forces and was slain in an ambush, 20 August 1359, on the bloody field of Theba in Andalusia (Hume's "Hist. of the Houses of Douglas and Angus"). Another version of this tragic event is given by Thomas Smibert in his "Hist. of the Clans of Scotland," that it was on the journey out Douglas was obliged to land at Valencia, and that when he came up with the Saracens he tossed the casket containing the heart of his royal master into the thickest of the enemy, bidding it "Go first as it was wont, and Douglas would follow or die." Douglas was slain, but his faithful followers, recovering possession of the casket and heart, conveyed them to Jerusalem and there buried them (Smibert's "Hist. of the Clans of Scotland," p. 323). It is believed that the heart and crosses-crosslet in the armorial bearings of the family are derived from the part this Duncan Adam took in this expedition (Burke's "Visitation of Seats and Arms," vol. ii., p. 31). His son,

REGINALD ADAM, in 1385, took part in an invasion of Northumberland, conducted by Sir James Douglas (eleventh Baron and second Earl of Douglas) and John de Vienne, Earl of Valentinois and Admiral of France (Burke's "Visitation of Seats and Arms," vol. ii., p. 31); "they took the castles of Wark, Foord, and Cornwall, and spoiled and burned the country between Berwick and Newcastle." Under the walls of the latter Douglas defeated, in personal encounter, Sir Henry Percy, better known as Harry Hotspur, and carried off in triumph his pennon. "But when the Scottish Chiefs intended to march farther, the continual rain that fell in great abundance, it being autumn, did so spoil the roads, raise the waters and wet the soldiers in their armour, that they were forced to return home" (Hume's "Hist. of the Houses of Douglas and Angus"). It was to redeem his pennon thus taken that Percy, invading Scotland in 1388, was defeated and taken prisoner at the Battle of Otterbourne, 15 August 1388, where Douglas, though victorious, was slain (Smibert's "Hist. of the Clans of Scotland"). This is the battle celebrated in the old Border ballad of "Chevy Chase." Reginald Adam's lineal descendant,

SIR JOHN ADAM, Knt., accompanied James IV. in his invasion of England August 1513, and fell at the Battle of Flodden Field 9 September 1513 (Burke's "Visitation of Seats and Arms," vol. ii., p. 31),

"In that undaunted ring
That fought unbroken round their King"

while vainly striving to shield their Sovereign from a similar fate. The conclusion of this battle is graphically described by Sir Walter Scott in "Marmion":—

"When skilful Surrey's sage commands,
Led back from strife his shattered bands;
Then did their loss his foemen know;
Their king, their lords, their mightiest low,
To tell red Flodden's dismal tale,
And raise the universal wail.
Tradition, legend, tune and song.
Shall many an age that wail prolong;
Still from the sire the son shall hear
Of the stern strife and carnage drear
Of Flodden's fatal field,
When shivered was fair Scotland's spear,
And broken was her shield."

"Marmion," canto vi.

Sir John Adam's son,

CHARLES ADAM, proprietor in 1549 of the estate of Fanno, co. Forfar, married Margaret Ferguson, and had issue two sons, Charles, his heir, and David, progenitor of the Adams of Kingsbarn, co. Fife, and two daughters (Burke's "Landed Gentry," 1846, vol. i., p. 4). The elder son,

CHARLES ADAM of Fanno, married Isabel Bisset, a descendant of the ancient family of Lissendrum (Burke's "Landed Gentry," 1846, vol. i., p. 4), and had issue several sons and daughters.* One of the former left a son,

JAMES ADAMS, a Colonel in the Army, who, affixing the letter "s" to his patronymic† and settling in the North of Ireland, probably in the county Down, in the early part of the seventeenth century, married the Hon. Catherine Magennis, dau. of Arthur Magennis, first Viscount Iveagh, by his wife Lady Sarah O'Neill, dau. of Hugh, Earl of Tyrone (Burke's "Landed Gentry," 1862). In 1641 Sir Phelim Roe O'Neill, Commander-in-Chief of the Insurgent Army, and cousin of Mrs. Adams, was breakfasting at Colonel Adams', and overhearing one of his sentries ask Mrs. Adams, who was leading by the hand down stairs her little son James, "Whose little heretic brat that was?" rushed out of the room, and, plunging his sword through the soldier's body, exclaimed, "Let him serve as a warning to all how they speak disrespectfully of the blood of the O'Neill!" Colonel Adams was succeeded by his son,

JAMES ADAMS, Captain in the Army of William III., who distinguished himself at the Battle of the Boyne 1 July 1690; married about 1672, and dying left two sons, James his heir, and another, father of Samuel Adams of Monaghan, who was executor in 1755 to his cousin Allen Adams of Corranearry House, co. Cavan (see below), and progenitor of the (now extinct) family of Adams of Monaghan. The elder son,

JAMES ADAMS of Monaghan, afterwards of Corranearry House, co. Cavan, born 1673, married 1694 Jane, daughter of William and Margaret Allen of Kilmore, co. Monaghan, and died 19 November 1744, aged 71. Mrs. Adams died 17 March 1752, aged 75, and both were interred in Knockbride churchyard, co. Cavan,* where their tomb still remains outside the south wall of the old church. They were succeeded by their only son, ALLEN ADAMS of Corranearry House, co. Cavan, born 1708; married about 1735 Martha (born 1702), daughter of William Higenbotham, Esq. (who died 1760), and granddaughter of Captain Thomas Higenbotham (who died 1737) by his wife Miss Williams, Maid of Honour to Mary II., and daughter of General Scurlog Williams of Clongill Castle, co. Meath.† He died 15 December 1755, aged 47, and was interred beside his parents. His will, signed 13 May 1755, was proved in Dublin 24 January 1756 (Probate Court, Dublin). Mrs. Adams continued to reside at Corranearry House with her second son James, and dying there 1807, aged 105, was interred in Knockbride, having had issue five sons and two daughters, namely: 1, RICHARD (see next page); 2, JAMES; 3, WILLIAM; 4, SAMUEL; 5, BENJAMIN; 6, MARGARET; 7, JANE.

* Knockbride Churchyard, enclosing both the present and the old churches, is situated on the road from Shercock to Stradone, about four miles from the former village. Corranearry Lough bounds two sides of the churchyard, and on a hill, on the opposite side of the Lough, stand the remains of Corranearry House, the original residence of the Adamses in Cavan. A short distance from it is Castletown House. In the old church, at the south-west corner, is a spacious vault belonging to the family of Richard Adams of Shercock House (see p. 6); but he himself lies with his ancestors in the cemetery adjoining. The old church is the place of burial of the Rev. Benjamin Adams and his descendants.

† By the marriage of Allen Adams with Miss Higenbotham, the Adams family enjoy the privilege of being hereditary freemen of the Borough of Drogheda, which had been granted to General Scurlog Williams and his descendants for ever, for the prompt and efficient aid afforded by him to the inhabitants of the town in 1690.

THE DESCENDANTS OF RICHARD ADAMS, ELDEST SON OF ALLEN
ADAMS AND MARTHA HIGENBOTHAM.

I. RICHARD ADAMS, J.P., of Shercock House,* co. Cavan, born 1736; was High Sheriff of Cavan in 1783 and of Monaghan in 1785 (Walker's "Hibernian Magazine"); married 13 April 1761 (Bailieborough Par. Reg.) Amelia, daughter of Thomas Cosby, Esq., of Beeks Court, co. Cavan, nephew of the Right Hon. Dudley Cosby, Lord Sydney, of Stradbally Hall, Queen's County; died 1789, aged 53. His will, signed 11 July 1789, with a codicil, dated 22 September 1789, was proved in Dublin 4 February 1790 (Probate Court, Dublin). He and his wife (who survived him some years) were interred in Knockbride, having had issue five sons and four daughters, viz. :—

He afterwards became Major and Paymaster of the Cavan Regiment; married 10 May 1789 (St. Peter's, Dublin, Par. Reg.) Catherine, daughter of Henry Leslie, Esq., of Dublin; was High Sheriff of Cavan in 1790 (Walker's "Hibernian Magazine"), and died at Shercock House 1809. Some of the garden wall still remains on the lake shore, to the rear of the market house, next which at the end of the town was the entrance-gate and lodge, the avenue corresponding in part to the modern road from Shercock to Canning's town. The house occupied the site of the present Roman Catholic Chapel. In the townland of Leix the boundaries of the Deer Park can still be traced, but its extensive woods, which within the memory of the past generation extended far around, have now their existence only in tradition. The mansion was allowed to go to ruin early in the nineteenth century.

He was also present as a Midshipman in a very gallant encounter off Genoa between the boats of the "Scout" and a French Squadron, consisting of a brig of 20 guns, one of 18, and seven gun-boats protected by a heavy fire from several batteries on shore, in face of which the largest of the enemy's vessels was sunk and the remainder beaten off, with a loss, however, to the British of the Master and eleven men killed and upwards of thirty wounded. On the night of 31 October 1809 Mr. Adams further served in the boats of the "Scout" and of a squadron under Lieut. John Tailour* at the capture and destruction, after a fearful struggle

Removing next in succession to the "Voluntaire" and "Cambrian" frigates, both commanded by Captain Charles Bullen, he joined in various cutting-out affairs, witnessed the reduction of the Island of Pomégue near Marseilles, and co-operated in the defence of Tarragona in May and June 1811 until the receipt of his Lieutenant's Commission, dated 15 February 1815; appointed to the "Ajax, 74," Captain George Mandy, 31 May 1815, and the "Hind," Captain Sir Charles Burrard, 17 April 1819 (O'Byrne's "Naval Biography"). He joined the "Ajax,"* and in her was present at the bombardment of Algiers 27 August 1816 by the British Fleet under Lord Exmouth (Family Reg.). He afterwards served in the Channel and Mediterranean, on board the "Bulwark, 74," Captains Sir Richard King and Thomas Brown, the "Christian VII., 80,"† Captain Henry Lidgbird Ball, and the "Grasshopper, 18," Captains Henry Robert Battersby and Sir Charles Burrard; appointed 24 September 1822 to the "Windsor Castle, 74," Captain Charles Dashwood, of the tender belonging to which ship he was for some time entrusted with the command; 12 January 1824 as First Lieutenant to the "Grasshopper, 18," Captain John George Aplin; 3 November 1824 to the command, on the Newfoundland station, of the "Pelter" gun-brig; 1 March 1826 to the "Rainillies, 74," Captain Hugh Pigot, by whom he was also invested with the charge of a tender; 20 October 1826 and 17 September 1828 as Senior to the "Harrier" and "Childers" sloops, both commanded by Captain William Morier (for his exertions in saving the latter, which was nearly wrecked in a violent gale off Yarmouth, he received the approbation of the Admiralty); 4 May 1829 in a similar capacity to the "Atholl, 28," Captain Alexander Gordon, on the coast of Africa; 6 January 1830 to the command of the "Plumper, 12," on the same station, where in a small gig with only five men he gallantly effected the capture, 7 November 1830, of the "Maria" of six guns and forty-four men, having on board 512 slaves, and was otherwise very successful; 23 July 1831 as First Lieutenant to the "Alfred, 50," Captain Robert Maunsell, in the Mediterranean, and 17 November 1834 to † This line of battleship was pierced for eighty-four guns and was added to the British Navy, the result of the siege of Copenhagen in 1807. She measured 2,131 tons, and was built in 1803 by the Danes. The model of the "Christian VII." was so much admired that a ship in every respect the same was immediately ordered to be built for the British Navy. That ship was the "Cambridge" of 2,189 tons, launched in 1815 (James' "Naval History," vol. iv., p. 295. London, 1847).

the command of the "Waterwitch, 10," in which vessel he served under the orders of Lord John Hay on the north coast of Spain, and was again successful in his anti-slavery exertions on the African station, attaining the rank of Commander 10 January 1837. He was appointed 19 January 1839 to the "Acorn, 16," destined for the same service, as was latterly the "Waterwitch." Returning therefore to the coast of Africa, he renewed his operations against the negro traffic during a prolonged service of four years and eight months, during part of which period he had charge of the station and squadron at Mozambique, cruising with wonderful activity and good fortune. Among the prodigious number of prizes made by the "Acorn" we may instance the capture, 6 July 1841, after a three days' chase and a running fight, of the "Gabriel," a piratical slave-brig, notorious for its injury to commerce and the frequency of its insults to the British Flag. His long, arduous, and highly useful services were at length rewarded, on his return to England, with a Post Commission, dated 18 December 1843. In 1849 he held the Civil appointment of Slave Commissioner at Loango (O'Byrne's "Naval Biography," p. 4); was appointed 4 January 1850 Captain of the "Gladiator, 6" on the African coast, and 10 April 1854 to the "Scourge, 6," and Commodore of the African Squadron, Governor of Ascension Island, etc. In 1862 was offered but declined the Governorship of Greenwich Hospital. Became Rear-Admiral of the Blue 6 February 1863, and of the White 5 March 1864. Received the Naval Silver Medal and nine clasps, a good-service pension, and medals from the Royal Humane Society for saving on different occasions eleven persons from drowning. Married first, 21 September 1838 (Ardrbracean Par. Reg.), Mary Anne, daughter of Thomas Gerrard, Esq., J.P., of Liscarton Castle, co. Meath, who died s.p. August 1843 at Bettystown, co. APPENDIX.

Extract from an anonymous MS. entitled "An Aphorismical Discovery of Treasonable Faction," preserved in the Library of Trinity College, Dublin, written between 1652 and 1660. Published in "Affairs in Ireland, 1641—1652." (Edited by J. Gilbert.)

1645. "Ormond and his faction examiniinge all theire witte, to invent a new scene, to frustrate this peere of this sposed comferte, to bringe this fatall design to the period of its wished end, had two strings in his bowe that one fayliegn the other could not misse, the Lord Lentenant therefore seriously advised the Earle of Tomo(nd) (all this while behavinge himself nenter, and consequently not troubled by either partie) to be reconciled to his cossen Insichuynes (whoe alias were foes) and caused my lord of Muskry, Tomond's nephewe, to worke this attonment, not for any other intention, then to worke the distruction of the K(ing's) partie, the Catholicks, and to impower the Prespeteriants, which reconcelment was to be perfected conditiona(l) that Tomond did give upp Bonrattie to Insichuynes, upon the hands of some prime comann(der) of his: whereby would mightily indure himself unto the Parliament, and would thereby prove most gratfull . . . both did nominate for governor of Bonrattie Colonell Adams . . . thither arrivinge with 600 men possessed himself of that brave house, and most comodious for the future trouble of the royallists."

Before giving up the castle of Bunratty to Colonel Adams the Earl of Thomond buried all his plate, etc., in the walls, but before he left some one told the soldiers that he had hidden it, and they made him shew where it was and took it all before his eyes.

Lord Muskerry marched to Bunratty and laid siege to the castle.

Extract from Richard Bellings' "History of the Irish Confederation and the War in Ireland, 1645-6." (Edited by J. Gilbert.)

"Thirdly, the Earl of Thomond, who before lived peaceably, without offending the country, in his castle of Bunratty, admitted into it at this time a garrison of eight hundred foot and threescore horse, most of them reformed officers, and, sayling into England, left that place, which was plentifully provided of victuals, and so seated, as the guarrison might from thence make excursions into the rich countreyes which for threescore miles long bordered upon the Shannon in the hands of the Parliament, under the command of (Captain McAdam) a stout officer, who began immediately to raise works to strengthen the castle, that, by reason of the marshes with which it was environed, might in a short time be upon the matter impregnable fortified."

* * * * *

Lord Muskerry encamped in the park and laid siege to the castle, which was considered very strong.

“Wherefore it was resolved that the two pieces of cannon newly sent them from Limerick should be planted to batter the little castle, which we have described to have stood near upon the edge of the outworks which the besieged had raised for defence of the place : the Irish being from thence much annoyed in their trenches, and their approaches retarded thereby. The battery was for two dayes continued against the side of the castle, which being thin, the bullets only peirced it, without shaking the fabrick ; and so undaunted did those intrusted with the guard of it maintaine it, that still as the cannon enlarged the breach, they at every shot poured forth a volley by the hole the bullets had made, until, towards the evening of the second day Captain McAdam, who commanded in Bunnratty, coming to view the place, and to give order for drawing off his men in case he found it not tenable, received a shot about his hams from a feildpiece that was planted among the gabions, in some of the higher stages of the fences made upon the side of the hill, to incommodate the enemy on his sally, not with any desigüe to play upon the castle, where it could be of little use ; but the cannoneer taking the upper window of the castle for a mark to try his skill, made that shot, which by accident was fatal to McAdam, who then was in the room, to which that window gave light, and being carried thence dyed that night.

“Whereof the Lord Muskery being advertised by one that came off from the beseiged, and knowing how much they were discouraged at the loss of so valiant a person, and how little unanimous they were in the choyce of one to succeed him, he caused provision of fagotts to be made and resolved to take advantage of this their consternation and difference, and to assault them in their works.”

* * * * *

After the attack the garrison capitulated for their lives, the officers retaining their swords, and they were allowed to return to Cork by sea.

The Family of Magennis, Viscount Iveagh.*

The Magennis were from a very early period the territorial Lords of Clan Aodha under the O'Haugheys, Chiefs of Iveagh in the County of Down, claiming descent from the famous warrior Connall Ceanach, and ranking as the head of the Clanna Rory. Morris McLoughlin, King of Ireland (1150—68), granted, about 1160, a Charter to the Abbey of Newry, among the witnesses to which is Aodh (Hugh), the great Magennis, Chief of the Clan Aodha in O'Neach Uladh, now the Baronies of Upper and Lower Iveagh, County Down.

In 1172 Mulmurry Macmurrugh, Lord of Muintir Birn, was slain by Hugh Magennis and the Clan Aodha of Ui Eathach Uladh. Muintir Birn was a part of Tyrone on the borders of Monaghan.

In 1173 Hugh Magennis and the Clan Aodha invaded and plundered the third part of Armagh, and about three months afterwards the said Hugh was slain.

In 1208 Duvinnis Magennis, Lord of Clan Aodha, was slain by the son of Donslevy O'Haugby, Chief of Iveagh. Subsequently the Magennis extended their territory and became Lords of Iveagh.

In 1314, when Edward II. sought the aid of the magnates of Ireland, he directed an especial letter to Admillis MacAneus, "Duci Hiberniorum et O'neagh," he being then "The Magennis."

In 1349 Murtough Riaganagh Magennis was slain by his own kinsmen, or as the Annals of Clannacnois state, by his brothers, and under the date 1348.

In 1359 Art, the son of Auliffe O'Rourke, was slain by Magennis.

In 1360 Art, son of Gillareagh Magennis, was treacherously slain by the sons of Savadge, a family who inhabited the territory now called "The Ards" in the east of the County Down.

In 1374 Senicin (Jenkin) Savadge was slain by Magennis.

In 1376 John O'Rooney, chief poet to "The Magennis," died.

In 1380 Art Magennis defeated the English and the people of Orior (part of Armagh) in a battle in which O'Hanlon, Chief of Orior, and many of the English were slain. Subsequently Edmund Mortimer, who had married the granddaughter of Edward III., came over as Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, when Magennis, who with various native chiefs had waited upon him, was treacherously taken prisoner in Mortimer's house. After this the Irish, and many of the English, became afraid to place any confidence in Mortimer, or trust themselves in his power. This Art Magennis, "sole prop of the hospitality of Ireland in his time," died in 1383 of the plague at Trim, where he was imprisoned.

In 1396 Cu-Uladh-Magennis, heir to the Lordship of Iveagh, was slain by the English.

In 1399 Murtough Magennis, son of Murtough More, Lord of Iveagh, was slain by his own tribe.

* Compiled from "The Annals of the IV. Masters"; John D'Alton's "Illustrations, Historical and Genealogical, of King James the Second's Army List, 1689"; Lodge's "Peerage"; Burke's "Extinct Peerage"; "Charta Abbatie de Newry"; Charendon MSS., British Museum; and Ware's "Prelates of Ireland."

In 1400 Rory Magennis, the son of Art ("The Magennis"), was slain by the sons of Cu-Uladh-O'Neill, assisted by Caffar Magennis, his own brother.

In 1418 Sir John Talbot, Baron Furnival, Lord Chief Justice of Ireland, having made a foray on Iveagh, sustained a severe defeat, in which an immense number of the English were slain or taken prisoners by Hugh Magennis ("The Magennis"), assisted by Mac-j-Neill Boy, Chief of Clannaboy.

In 1420 the Earl of Ormond, Lord Deputy, waging war with the Ultonians to obtain dominion for O'Neill, reduced Magennis under submission to O'Neill and delivered up his hostages to him.

In 1422 Niall Garv O'Donnell, Lord of Tirconnell, invaded Iveagh and subdued Magennis, who subsequently assisted him in his expedition into Connaught against the MacDonoughs.

In 1424 the Earl of Ormond, Lord Deputy, made an excursion against Magennis and demolished his castle of Lough Brierenn (now Lough Brickland, County Down), killed the Constable of his gallowglass, and almost the whole ward of the Castle. Soon afterwards Hugh Magennis died of the plague, and his son Rory succeeded him as "The Magennis," and was slain in 1426, in his own house, by Brian Magennis.

In 1453 Cu-Uladh, a son of Cuthbhan Magennis, heir to the Lordship of Iveagh, with Hugh Magennis and several other chiefs, fell in the battle of Ardglass, fighting for Henry Mac-j-Neill Boy, Chief of Clannaboy, against the Savages of Ards, assisted by the English of Dublin, when the latter were victorious, the Chief of Clannaboy being taken prisoner.

In 1488 Brian Magennis ("The Magennis"), son of Art, died, and his brother Hugh was inaugurated in his place.

In 1491 Echmily, son of Hugh, son of Art Magennis, was slain in his own house in a nocturnal assault by the sons of Melaghlín, the son of Murtough, son of Owen O'Neill.

In 1493 Hugh, son of Art, son of Hugh Magennis, assisted Henry Oge O'Neill against Hugh Roe O'Donnell at the battle of Beanna-Boircha (part of the Mourne Mountains), where the latter was victorious.

In 1495 he again assisted O'Neill in invading Fermanagh, but they had to agree to Maguire's terms for peace.

In 1501 Rory McMahon, son of Brian, son of Redmond, was slain by the sons of Magennis.

In 1504 (15 August) Donnell Magennis, with several other Irish chiefs, assisted the Lord Justice (Garrett, son of Thomas, Earl of Kildare) against MacWilliam Burke of Clanricard, Turlough O'Brien, etc., at the battle of Cnoc-Tuagh (now Knockdoc, a hill near Galway), where MacWilliam Burke and his allies were defeated.

In 1520 Donnell, the son of Hugh, the son of Art Magennis ("The Magennis"), died, and his brother Phelim the Hospitable was inaugurated in his place. He also died, and Edmond Boy Magennis was styled "The Magennis."

In 1526 Glasney, the son of Hugh Magennis, Abbot of the Monks of Newry and Prior of Down and Saul, was slain by the sons of Donnell Magennis, namely Donnell Oge and his kinsmen.

In 1539 Murtough Magennis was taken prisoner by the men of Oriel after the defeat of the northern forces by Lord Leonard, the Lord Justice, at the battle of Bel-atha-hoa (now Belahoe, Barony of Farney, County Monaghan), and after some time was put to death by them at the instigation of his own tribe, who bribed them to commit the deed.

In 1550 Arthur Magennis swore fidelity to Edward VI., and was by him confirmed in the bishopric of Dromore, while Eugene (Owen) Magennis was about the same time Bishop of Derry.

In 1566 Mary, the daughter of Mannis, son of Hugh Duv, son of Hugh Roe O'Donnell, Prince of Tircconnell, and wife of "The Magennis," died on 8 October. At the Parliament, which met in Dublin 26 April 1585 under Sir John Perrott, the Lord Deputy, the Magennis were represented by Hugh, the son of Donnell Oge, the son of Donnell Duv alias Ciar (of the dark brown hair) Magennis.

In 1595 Hugh, son of Hugh, son of Donnell Oge Magennis, a man of his patrimony of greatest name and renown among the English and Irish of Ireland, died penitently.

In 1607 Catherine Magennis, daughter of "The Magennis," who had married Hugh O'Neill, Earl of Tyrone, left Ireland, on board a vessel from Lough Swilly, for Normandy. On the Plantation of Ulster, Bryan Oge Mac Rory Magennis of Edenticallow, County Down, having surrendered all his lordship, precinct, or circuit of Killwarlin, with all the townlands within the said territory, obtained a re-grant thereof in 1611 to hold the same henceforth free from Royal Composition. Other members of the family obtained grants of estates in the same county. Sir Arthur Magennis, Knt., also releasing to the King all his claim and right to the territory of Iveagh, had, in 1613, a grant of various and extensive townlands of his old inheritance within Iveagh, the extent of which was soon after directed to be ascertained on inquisition. He was raised to the Peerage of Ireland as Viscount Magennis of Iveagh, County Down, by a patent dated at Westminster 18 July 1623. He married Sarah, daughter of Hugh O'Neill, Earl of Tyrone, and had issue Hugh, his heir; Evelyn, married Sir James MacSorley Boy MacDonnell, Knt., ancestor of the present Earl of Antrim; Catherine, married Colonel Adams (vile p. 5); and another daughter, married to Bryan O'Neill of Edinluff, Carrick, ancestor of the late Viscount O'Neill. Viscount Iveagh, dying 21 May 1629, was succeeded by his son Hugh Magennis as second Viscount, who married Mary, eldest daughter of Sir John Bellew of Bellew's Town, and dying, was succeeded by his son Arthur Magennis as third Viscount, who with Daniel Magennis of Angerstown, County Meath, was attainted in 1642. At the Supreme Council in 1646 sat Arthur Magennis, Roman Catholic Bishop of Down and Connor, as one of the Spiritual Peers, while of the Commons were five of the family. Oliver Cromwell's Act of 1652 excepted from pardon for life and estate Viscount Iveagh, Sir Con Magennis, Knt., of the County of Down, and five others of the name. The declaration of Royal thanks in the Act of Settlement includes Captain Phelim Magennis and Lieutenant Bryan Magennis, of the Province of Ulster, with Lieutenant Con "Mac Gennis" of Iveagh, County Down. Lord Iveagh, dying 1683, was interred 1 May in St. Catherine's Church, Dublin (Lodge's "Peerage," vol. iv., p. 170), and was succeeded by either his brother or uncle, Bryan Magennis, as fourth Viscount, who appears in the Pension List of the Establishment for 1687-88 under the name of "Arthur, Viscount Iveagh" for a pension of £300 [see original vellum manuscript in the Library of Trinity College, Dublin, marked MS. E.I.I., dated 3 February at Whitehall, and signed by the Council in England]. Besides Colonel Lord Iveagh, the name of Magennis is commissioned on five other regiments. Lord Iveagh and his sept furnished James II. with a Regiment of Dragoons and another of Infantry. This nobleman sat in the Parliament of 1689; while in the Commons, Murtough Magennis of Green Castle and Eiver Magennis of Castlewellan represented the County Down, and Bernard Magennis of Bally-gorionbeg was one of the members for the Borough of Killileagh. Lord Iveagh was appointed Governor (i.e. Lord Lieutenant) of the County of Down, while two other members of the family were his deputy-governors.

In 1690 Lord Iveagh was Governor of Drogheda with a garrison of 1500 men. On the day succeeding the Battle of the Boyne, King William sent Brigadier de la Mellonière with a thousand horse and a party of foot to summon the town to surrender, and on their hesitation to inform the garrison that he should bring up his cannon, when they must expect no quarter. Lord Iveagh surrendered on condition that he and his garrison should be conveyed to Athlone, the nearest garrisoned town, with their baggage, leaving behind them their stores, ammunition and arms, except the officers' swords.

In June 1691 two officers of this sept were killed in Athlone, and at the battle of Anghrim 12 July 1691 was taken prisoner Lient.-Colonel Murtough Magennis (for to that rank had a Captain of Sir Neill O'Neill's Dragoons arrived by reason of the slaughter of that gallant regiment at the Battle of the Boyne). When Galway surrendered, 26 July 1691, Lady Iveagh and her daughter, being then resident in the town, had an especial protection for themselves in the Articles of Capitulation. She had been Lady Margaret De Burgh, daughter of William, the seventh Earl of Clanricarde, and had married 1689 Viscount Iveagh. At the close of the campaign he did not accompany the Irish Army to France, but entered the Austrian Service with a choice battalion of 500 men, part of the 2000 Irish troops of King James's old army, who were landed from Cork at Hamburg in June 1692. He employed them against the Turks, by whom they were so severely handled that the remnant was drafted into other corps of the Imperial Army. The attainders of 1691 present twelve of the name of Magennis. Lord Iveagh died in 1692 without an heir, when the title became extinct.

Lady Iveagh married secondly Colonel Thomas Butler of Kilcash, and died 19 July 1744, leaving issue three sons and five daughters.

A Captain Murtough Magennis of Bulkeley's Brigade was wounded at Lauffield in 1747.

The Family of O'Neill.

The family of O'Neill descend from Niall Glundubh, Monarch of Ireland, who was killed in battle A.D. 954 against the Danes. Their title was "The O'Neill." One of them, Henry Mac Owen O'Neill, married Eleanor, eldest daughter of Thomas, seventh Earl of Kildare; their son Con More O'Neill married a daughter of Gerald, eighth Earl of Kildare, and had issue two sons, Con Baccagh O'Neill, or "The Lame," and Art Oge O'Neill, ancestor of Sir Phelim Roe O'Neill (vide p. 5). The elder son Con, on relinquishing the title of "The O'Neill," was in 1552 created by Henry VIII. Earl of Tyrone, with remainder to his son Matthew, created Baron of Dungannon, who was killed during his father's lifetime by his brother Shane, leaving three sons, Brian, Hugh, and Cormac. The eldest, Brian, became second Earl of Tyrone, but was soon murdered by his brother Hugh, who became in 1585 the third Earl of Tyrone, but throwing off his allegiance to England he assumed the ancient title of "The O'Neill," and engaged in a war against the English, which, for a time, was successful, gaining several victories over the armies sent against him; but after the siege of Kinsale in 1603, finding his cause hopeless, he fled to Spain. He was attainted in 1612 by James I., when his title, Earl of Tyrone, became forfeited. He died 20 July 1616 at Rome, having had issue five sons: (1) Hugh O'Neill, died s.p. in Italy. (2) Henry O'Neill, a Lieut.-General in the Spanish Army, where he was called El Conde de Tyrone. He died leaving issue, which became extinct in the male line in the second generation. (3) Shane O'Neill,* remained in Ireland. (4) Con O'Neill, fled to Spain. (5) Bryan O'Neill, hanged at Brussels in 1617 for high treason against James I.

* In 1895 the death occurred in Paris of the Comte O'Neill de Tyrone (as he was known in that city), who claimed to be a descendant of this Shane O'Neill, and hereditary head of the family. Although his family had long been settled in France, he kept up his interest in Ireland and was well known to Irishmen visiting Paris. During the Franco-German War he identified himself with the Irish Ambulance.
